

About SCRS

Founded in 2012, SCRS is a global organization that unifies the voice of the clinical research site community for greater site sustainability. Representing sites around the world, SCRS membership provides sites with a community dedicated to advocacy, education, mentorship and connectivity. SCRS is an influential voice for sites and an active partner in industry-wide initiatives and dialogues focused on improving the clinical research enterprise. Our Voice. Our Community. Your Success. Join the community.

Membership Categories

Individual Site

Individual sites are defined as one address with an investigator where clinical research is conducted. Examples are a clinic, a private practice conducting clinical research, a freestanding research site, or a department within a hospital or academic center when the organization is not a member.

Non-Profit/Hospital/Academic Center

Emerging Site

Emerging sites are defined as a site with gross revenue of less than or equal to 250K USD in the prior year and not expected to exceed that amount this year.

Sites in Developing Countries

Sites in developing countries are defined as an address with an investigator where clinical research is conducted in a low, lower-middle, or upper-middle country listed.

Site Network

Site networks are defined as a group of clinical research sites that conduct research at multiple locations under one organization. The site network category is best financially suited for organizations with 8 or more sites.
